As a matter of precaution, however, all these vessels are detained.

The Fuida's cabin passengers were allowed to go up to the city yesterday in transfe coats, and to-day the ship and baggage are being disinfected and her steerage passengers are being disinfected on board ship. The Stubbenhuk will probably be detained the ive-day limit, and the same is likely in the case of the Dormstadt. There was a remote possibility this morning that La Bourgogne's cabin passengers might be allowed to go up to the city this afternoon.

During the morning also the Iroquois, El Sol, Atlas liner Alene, and the Nacooche were passed.

President Wilson, of the Health Department, said to-day that the Board had as yet taken no official action in the matter. The percentage of impurity was very slight, he said, and he understood that Commissioner Gilroy had a large force of men at work in the water-shed clearing away many nuisances.

HIS VALET AN AUTOCRAT.

Beaumarchais Obeyed When His

"Man" Told Him to Go to Bed. The old-fashioned valet or body-servant of a European gentleman enjoyed extraordinary privileges, says the Youth's Comsanion. Often he gave himself the air of the master, while the master found it desirable to obey, more or less meekly. Beaumarchais, a famous French author had a servant. Antoine by name, who had been long in his service, and against whose tyranny he (seldom a ventured o rebel. One evening, in his old tge, the great man was engaged in a game of chess, when Antoine entered and said somewhat sharply, but respectfully: Monsieur, it is 10 o'clock." " Very well, Antoine," the mester answored; " but let me finish the game." " If you don't come now, monsier you will be tired to-morrow morning.

'Oh, no; I think, Antoine." "And being tired, you will not want to get up."
"Oh, yes, Antoine: I shall get up,"
"No. monsieur, you will not get up."
"All right, Antoine, I will go in a few

"In a minute, in a minute!"
"And you will have no appetite for breakfast, monsieur."

breakfast, monsieur."

"Come, now, let me finish this game.
Can't you see the clock is fast?"

"But the clock is slow, monsieur."

"I tell you it is fast!"

"The clock is slow, monsieur."

"Now, now! The game is almost done.

"But if the game were almost done you would not have so many pawns left, measieur."
Autoine, I should have been done already if you had let me alone."
But I shall not let you alone, monsicur." I tell you I shall finish the game! Get out, Antome!"

"We will get out together, mension." Get out, Antoine!"

"We will get out together, monsieur."

"Antoine, I'm not a baby!"

"You do not cry, monsieur, Ande from that there is not much difference."

The dialogue went on in this way for some time. Beaumarchais, shangring has shoulders, moved a pawn on the obemboard, and then Antoine, bowing very low, and with a great outward air of respect to the company, seized the board and tipped it over, dumping the chemmen in a heap on the floor.

Beaumarchais was on the point of flying into a violent rage, but at the sight of his vatet, who stood by wearing an air of sweet humility joined with consciouaness of duty nobly done, he burst into a loud fit of laughter and suffered himself to be led home and put to bed.

The very next morning Beaumarchais was found dead in bed. Whether or not the excitement of this mild controversy with his valet hastened his death is not known. Antoine, at ano rate, was sure that he had done his duty, and it is quite possible that his care of the old gentleman had already prolonged his life.
